Dear brother Finley

I have just read your note of yesterday & in answer must say that I should be very happy to visit you & preach for you, if I could make it conform with my duties, but at present I am very busy, & I am unable to fix upon any time to take an excursion to your City. I trust however that your health will soon be restored, & that you will favor us with a visit. I am now keeping house, & would be glad to entertain you.

I am gratified to learn that you are still employing your pen for useful purposes. I can take your manuscript & prepare it for the press (if you desire,) without putting you to any other expense than that of copying which I suppose would be but a trifle.

My kind regards to Bro Moody. With sincere wishes for your temporal & eternal happiness I am

Yours fraternally
